Antebellum Plantation in Blackstock, SC

Albion Plantation is approximately 4,600 square feet and is a true Southern Antebellum Plantation on 129.81 acres of timberland, meadows, creeks and hills that also houses a working timber farm. It is considered "one of the finest examples of 19th century plantation construction in South Carolina" and has been in the same family since being built in 1840.

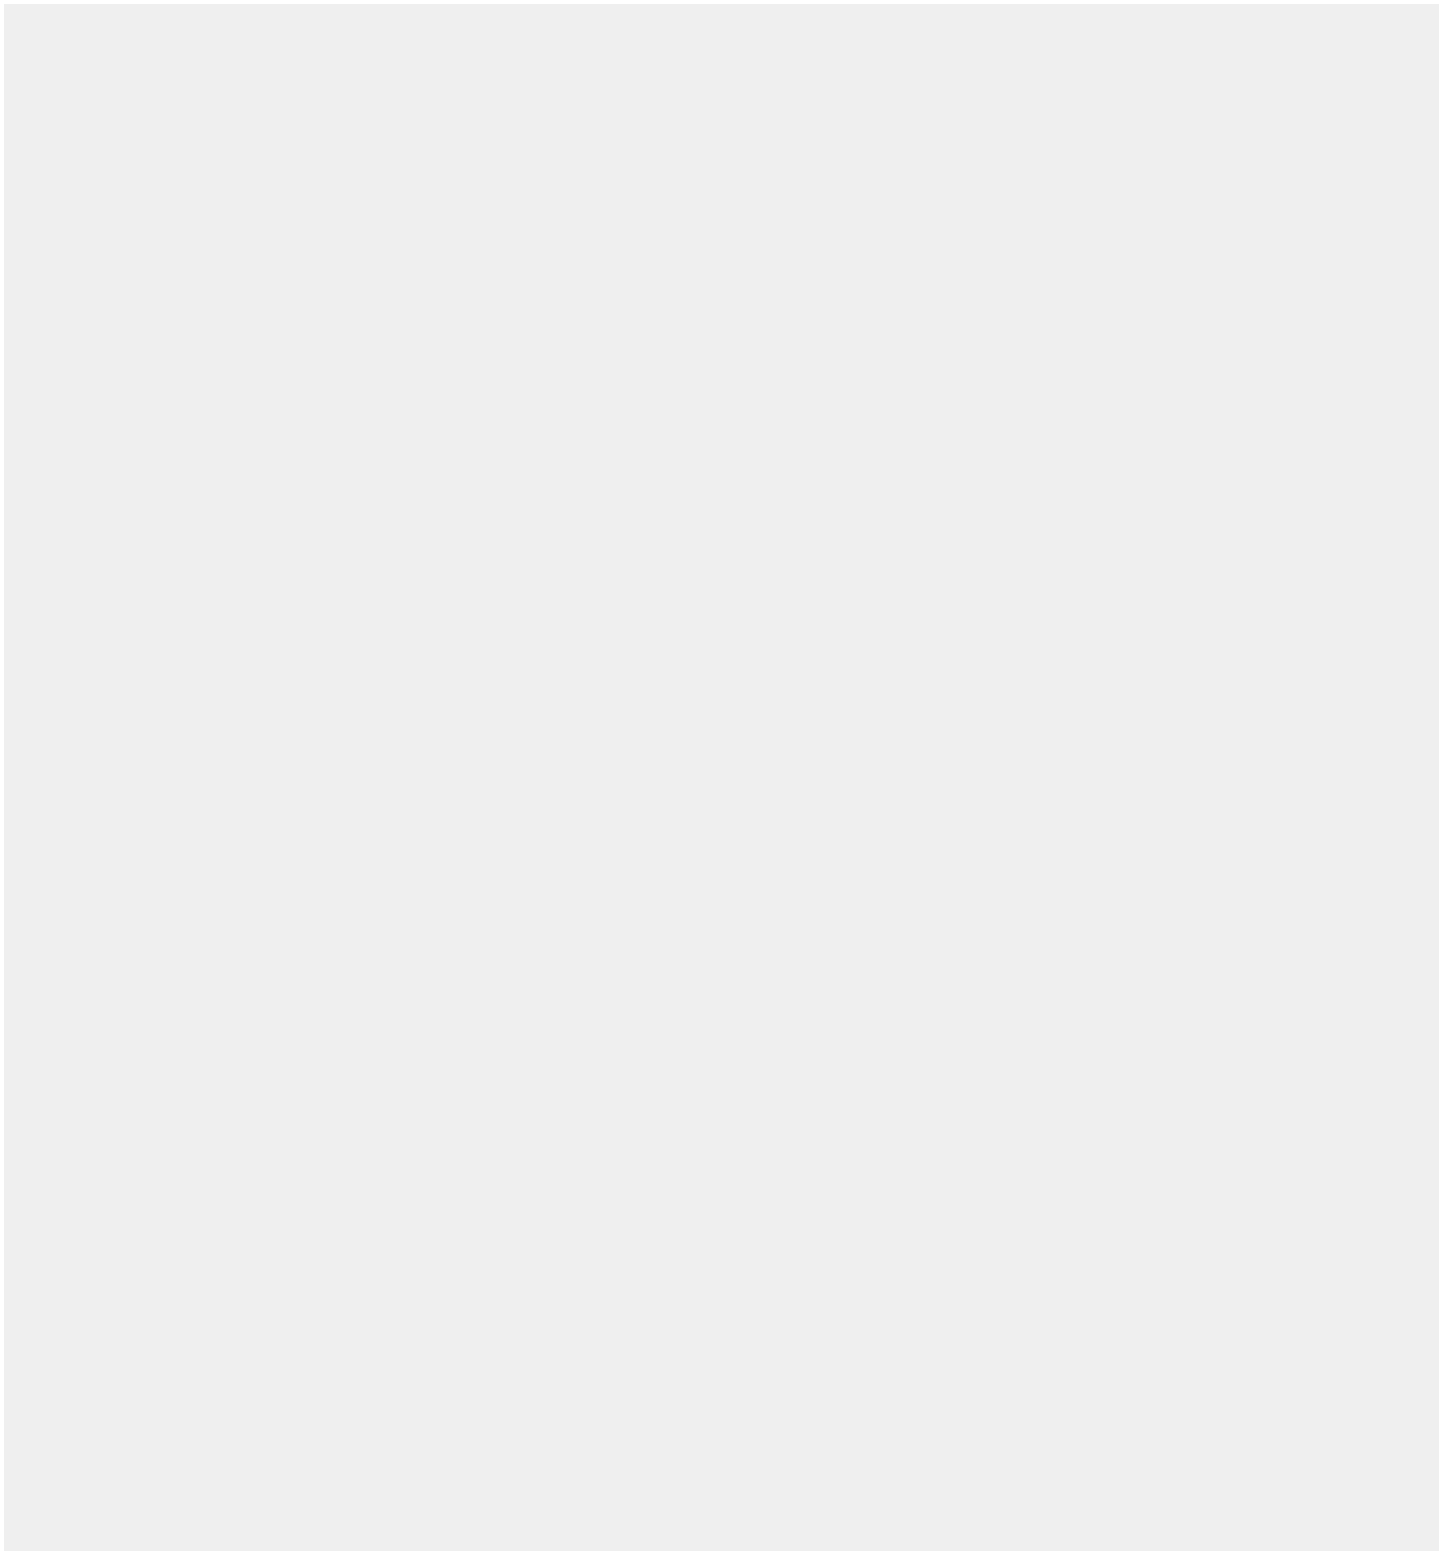

This imposing structure is located on an elevated site at the head of a tree-lined, gated entryway with an original Winnsboro Blue Granite horse block/carriage step still in place along with many Blue Granite fence posts around the property and is also complemented by an old timber/log barn which was the original residence.

With entrances on all four sides the home is fronted by a two-story piazza supported by ten large columns and enclosed with picketed banisters; the entire second floor is covered by a gabled roof that extends over the upper piazza and is topped by a beautiful gabled dormer; two of the side porches are roofed as well.

The spacious interior is graced by original hardwood floors, elegant mantels over the eight fireplaces, fanlights, tall windows, rosettes, cornices and moldings, all period authentic. The first floor consists of a large eat in kitchen with mudroom, formal dining room, large parlor/library (with back stairway), formal living room, bedroom and private bathroom which could be used as a first floor master or as an in-law or guest suite.

The second floor is reached from the front hall by a winding three story staircase (including third floor attic and storage access) and includes a large master suite and two large bedrooms with a shared bath and extensive back hall storage cabinets. Kitchen and bathrooms updated without damaging the character and authenticity of the home.

If privacy is what you seek, "Albion" is secluded, peaceful and well separated from neighbors. Although the family has not occupied the property full time for several years, the home has seen use as a vacation home and for entertaining. As a result, the property has been maintained as circumstances required over the years. Some furnishings may be available as well.
